The Five Sisters, a group of five coral atolls near Rabigh, are popular with divers, is renowned for its stunning biodiversity. While there are five atolls in total, three sites are recommended here.

These sites offer a range of depths, from 29m to 35m, and varying current strengths, making them suitable for a wide variety of diving and snorkelling levels. While you may experience a challenging section, they're sure to reward those up for the adventure.

The atolls are characterised by their lush and vibrant coral reefs, with pinnacles full of luminescent hard and soft coral heads creating a breath-taking terrain that is home to a wide variety of marine life. The reason so many creatures – from the simple tuna to the majestic silky shark – call this location home is because the National Center of Wildlife has declared the Five Sisters marine reserves in recognition of the importance of reef health to the surrounding natural ecosystems.

The first site is suitable for all diving levels and has divers start at the south corner of the main reef, north of the lighthouse. The stunning visibility of 60m means a clear view of the colourful wire coral as you descend the reef wall to a sandy bottom
