Abu Tair reef, a vibrant diving destination situated in the Red Sea off the coast of Jeddah, welcomes divers of all skill levels to explore its lively underwater world and captivating shipwrecks. This mesmerizing underwater landscape is characterised by multi-coloured coral gardens, diverse marine life, warm water temperatures and no currents, ensuring a remarkable diving experience.

At the north end of Abu Tair reef, Marble Wreck (officially Abusabaa) offers a perfect introduction to shipwreck exploration. Named after the cargo it was carrying when it sank in 1979, Marble Wreck lies in shallow waters just 10m below the surface. Over time, the Red Sea has transformed the ship into an artificial reef, providing a habitat for diverse marine life, such as lionfish, soldierfish, moray eels and bluespotted stingrays. The ship's bow and mast are adorned with pink sponges and Acropora corals, creating a breathtaking underwater scene.

The dive features a large coral pinnacle and provides the opportunity to swim through schools of juvenile barracudas. With minimal currents, divers can fully appreciate the rich history of the shipwreck and the vibrant marine life of the surrounding Abu Tair reef.
